TOWN SHUT
UP TIGHT*Travelers by Steamship
Mongolia Badly
Jarred.

Freak features of the Sunday-closing law came to light yesterday during the brief stay of the steamship Mongolia in port. Passengers came up town and saw nothing but desolate-looking rows of closed stores.

"This is certainly a bum town," said a Chicago business man as he left the vicinity of the corner of Fort and Hotel streets. "I came ashore this morning to buy some collars and shirts, and have tried every way to get them, but they can't be got. I am in need of some extra articles of wear and banked on getting them when I got to Honolulu."

Another passenger drifted into the office of the Hawaii Promotion Committee.

"Is this the Promotion Committee's office?"

"Yes, sir," was the reply of the secretary who was getting some mail off by the Mongolia.

"Well, say, can you tell me where I can get a cigar in this town? I've been all over it in a hack and haven't located one yet."

The secretary handed one over to the passenger with the remark that he probably couldn't buy one if he tried again.

Just then a mounted police officer rode up to the Promotion office, dismounted and came inside.

"High Sheriff say all curio store must close on Sunday," he announced to Secretary Boyd.

"But this isn't a curio store," was the reply.

"Well, High Sheriff say all curio store close anyhow," persisted the officer.

"But this is not a curio store, I tell you."

The officer looked around at the calabashes and tapas in the window, and then glanced suspiciously back as he mounted his wheel and rode away. The promotion office did not close, however.

"Where can we get a glass of soda-water?" asked a young lady resident as she stood on the corner at Fort and King streets, fanning herself. "Oh, dear, I never wanted to have a soda so much in all my life. Why, there isn't even a place where I can get a drink of water."

And so it went on.

"If you ever catch me coming to this place again, it'll be because I couldn't help myself," said another passenger as he started back to the Mongolia. "I know I can get a bottle of beer aboard, so me for the boat instanter."
